Abstract

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of self-reported depression between men and women who had been exposed to violence by intimate partners. Data from the National Longitudinal Study of Women's Health are used. Results show that among women who have ever been married, those who reported being physically or sexually abused by their husbands had higher rates of self-reported depression than those who did not report such abuse. This association remained significant after controlling for other factors associated with depression.

Figure 1. Schematic representation of the experimental design. The subjects were divided into two groups: the control group (CG) and the experimental group (EG). The CG was divided into two subgroups: the control group (CG) and the control group (CG). The EG was divided into two subgroups: the experimental group (EG) and the experimental group (EG). The CG was divided into two subgroups: the control group (CG) and the control group (CG). The EG was divided into two subgroups: the experimental group (EG) and the experimental group (EG).

Figure 1 illustrates the experimental setup. A subject is seated at a table, looking at a video screen. A video camera is positioned above the screen. A light source is positioned to the left of the screen. A target is positioned on the screen. A ruler is placed on the table. A scale bar is shown at the bottom right of the diagram.

Figure 1. The effect of the concentration of the Agrobacterium suspension on the transformation efficiency of Agrobacterium strains. The number of transformed cells was determined by the number of colonies on the selective medium. The data are the mean values of three independent experiments. Error bars represent standard deviation.
